SHE LET BIM HUG HEB .- John Hodger, a young man, was tried in the Criminal Court, in Baltimore, yesterday on the charge of feloniously assaulting Anna Fredericks Yauser, on January 21st, at Mooney's saloon in that city. The story as told by the woman on the stand, was that she met Hodges on the street, and asked him to tell her the way she wanted to ge. That Hodges offered to show her the way; that they storged in a saloon for some time. they stopped in a saloon, for some time, where she drank a gless of milk; that from there Hodges induced her to go to another place, saying his mother and eister lived there, and that his father was dead; that he wanted her to drink again, and that, si-though she at first refused, she finally took a glass of milk, and after that knew nothing more until two or three hours afterwards, when she awakened from sleep to find herself undressed in a room on the third floor of the place. She said that Hodges hugged her on the street before going to the saloon. The defense would have been; the free consent of the woman, but the State abandoned
